

KAI STAUDACHER

Kai Staudacher, ex-postman, hyperactive sports fanatic & head of his own communication design agency in Frankfurt - addicted to spray paint & tape.
"When I was 6 years old my parents made me watch the Olympics on TV until the early morning - since then I've been crazy about the weird contortions from sports books and football magazines where people are frozen in the strangest positions. I get them out of there and breathe life back into them...with a bit of aerosol and a scalpel. Chance is absolutely welcome in my work, but I decide how long it can stay and what it leaves behind! Numbers are very important because in sport everything is counted - time, distance, length, height, goals.... even the players!
